3. How to apply to become a policeman or woman

Papua New Guinea Police Recruitment: Applications are open for recruitment twice a year. Usually, calls for recruitment are published in the local newspapers, or you can write directly to the headquarters in Port Moresby for the latest application forms.

1. Write to the Police headquarters for application forms. If the application forms are available in the newspapers, cut out the form.
2. Fill out the forms and attach two references and all your academic transcripts and certificates.
3. Send your applications to the address given below.

Shortlisting and Interview: If you are shortlisted for an interview, the officer in charge of the screening process will notify you either by phone or through print media.

1. Screening: The screening process involves reviewing the applicant's eligibility and verifying that they meet the minimum requirements for the position, such as citizenship, education, and age.
2. Testing: The testing process usually includes a written examination, which evaluates the applicant's cognitive abilities, problem-solving skills, and general knowledge.
3. Interview: Applicants who pass the written examination will then be invited to attend an interview, which assesses their communication skills, personality traits, and overall suitability for the role. The interview may be conducted by one or more members of the recruitment team.
4. Medical Checks: Applicants who pass the interview may then be required to undergo medical checks, including a physical examination, to ensure that they are in good health and physically able to perform the duties of the role.
5. Physical Fitness Test: Applicants who pass the medical checks will then undergo a physical fitness test to assess their physical abilities and endurance. The fitness test usually includes exercises such as running, push-ups, sit-ups, and a beep test.

If you successfully complete all these processes, you will be shortlisted to undergo training at the National Centre of Excellence, Bomana for 9 months.

5. Tips for successful application Papua New Guinea Police Recruitment

The best way to apply for the PNG Police Recruitment is to get as much info as you can. Once you know what to do, you can do it right the first time. So, call or write to the police HQ or, better still, contact the recruitment officer directly.

When you deal with recruitment officers (or proxies) DO NOT pay a bribe. This is a community service – the officers are public servants – and they'll help you.

Attach all the necessary documents. Take your application to your teacher, pastor, policeman, magistrate or senior citizen to check before you make the submission. When you have submitted the application form, follow up immediately. Ask when the selection list is coming out.
